

Leading Professional Learning Communities

Join us for the seventh-annual Leading Professional Learning Communities workshop for high school educators. During this workshop, participants will explore how to develop their school teams into Professional Learning Communities that focus on student achievement and success. Participants will also gain strategies for effectively facilitating adult learning and walk away with concrete protocols and tools for immediate use.

The experience is designed to deepen reflective practice and facilitative leadership skills for educators, with an emphasis on better understanding the impact of race and equity.

At the workshop, participants will:

- ◆ Explore the significance of facilitative leadership to improve student learning.
- ◆ Cultivate a toolbox (i.e. protocols, templates) to use for rigorous work with teams.
- ◆ Hone strategies for leading equity-centered work among adults that is focused on students.
- ◆ Practice facilitative skills, such as giving and receiving constructive feedback on professional practice.
- ◆ Examine student and adult work with the use of targeted tools and protocols.
- ◆ Develop a practical plan for leading a PLC.
