

Equity-Based Leadership

This July, the Network for College Success will host our Equity-Based Leadership workshop, an intensive experience designed to push your thinking, provoke questions, prompt critical reflection, and collectively make deeper meaning of how equity work can be applied to your practice. Individuals interested in leading transformational work, namely those in the education space, are encouraged to register.

The five-day workshop will serve as a learning space to engage in challenging work around identity and leadership as well as an opportunity to explore your impact within your professional community.

Guiding our work together is this essential question: What's required of me to radically transform my practice in order to wrestle with issues of equity, deepen relationships, and engage in necessary discourse to improve outcomes for our most underserved communities?

At the workshop, participants will:

- ◆ Build awareness of personal narratives, race, culture, and systemic/institutional factors that produce inequitable outcomes.
- ◆ Engage with texts, structures, tools, ideas, and colleagues in order to develop skills, deepen knowledge, and strategize around individual and team equity-centered work.
- ◆ Build (and be in) community with colleagues across difference for the purpose of building alliances needed to pick up equity-centered work.
