

Improving High School Graduation Rates

National Freshman Success Institute

Setting Freshmen on the Path to Graduation

Join us for 7 days of powerful learning with teams of educators from across the country, focused on:

- Successfully transitioning students from middle to high school
- Examining the research-based indicators that matter most for high school success
- Supporting students to stay "on-track" to graduation
- Analyzing data to inform instruction & student supports
- Moving beyond mitigating course failure to improving course performance
- Leading and supporting freshmen grade-level teacher teams
- Collaborative action planning
- Site visits to high schools that have demonstrated success

Space is limited. Registration Deadline: May 5th

The Network for College Success (NCS) partners with educators and leaders to improve high school graduation and college success rates for students. NCS builds the capacity of leaders to create and sustain schools where all students excel and where race and socioeconomic status no longer predict future success. By translating cutting-edge research into practice, NCS supports high school leaders to organize their schools for continuous improvement.
